Siemens Canada is recognizing the impact employees have made through community involvement. This year, the company donated a total of $30,000 to four Canadian non-profit organizations as recognition of the winners of an internal employee contest called Caring Hands Contest.

Siemens Caring Hands represents a culture of giving that is cultivated by Siemens Canada. The contest empowers employees to make a difference in their communities. Employees who have demonstrated their dedication to volunteering and fundraising activities were invited to enter the contest.

Two top winners were selected to receive $10,000 donations to their charities of choice, with two runner-up winners receiving $5,000 donations to their charities. The winners of the fundraising category, Steve Maniguy of Oakville, ON, chose to support the Coast To Coast Against Cancer Foundation with Siemens’ donation. Maniguy fundraised more than $31,000 for the organization by cycling 1,384 km over eight days at two annual cycling events. His team raised more than $355,000 for the cause.

The winner of the volunteering category, Scott Narmeet of Cambridge, ON, chose to grant the donation to the Scorpions Youth Volleyball Club. Narmeet organized a developmental volleyball program for boys in Grades 7 and 8 for the club, engaging local youths to participate in sports.

The runner-up in the volunteering category, Kathe Cobb of Montreal, QC, supported the West Island Association for the Intellectually Handicapped in her hometown with Siemens’ $5,000 donation. Cobb has volunteered for many years by spending time with teens and adults supported by the association and most recently supported their annual fundraising walk.

Siemens Canada is recognizing the impact employees have made through community involvement. This year, the company donated a total of $30,000 to four Canadian non-profit organizations as recognition of the winners of an internal employee contest called Caring Hands Contest.

Siemens Caring Hands represents a culture of giving that is cultivated by Siemens Canada. The contest empowers employees to make a difference in their communities. Employees who have demonstrated their dedication to volunteering and fundraising activities were invited to enter the contest.

Two top winners were selected to receive $10,000 donations to their charities of choice, with two runner-up winners receiving $5,000 donations to their charities. The winners of the fundraising category, Steve Maniguy of Oakville, ON, chose to support the Coast To Coast Against Cancer Foundation with Siemens’ donation. Maniguy fundraised more than $31,000 for the organization by cycling 1,384 km over eight days at two annual cycling events. His team raised more than $355,000 for the cause.

The winner of the volunteering category, Scott Narmeet of Cambridge, ON, chose to grant the donation to the Scorpions Youth Volleyball Club. Narmeet organized a developmental volleyball program for boys in Grades 7 and 8 for the club, engaging local youths to participate in sports.

The runner-up in the volunteering category, Kathe Cobb of Montreal, QC, supported the West Island Association for the Intellectually Handicapped in her hometown with Siemens’ $5,000 donation. Cobb has volunteered for many years by spending time with teens and adults supported by the association and most recently supported their annual fundraising walk.

Siemens Canada is recognizing the impact employees have made through community involvement. This year, the company donated a total of $30,000 to four Canadian non-profit organizations as recognition of the winners of an internal employee contest called Caring Hands Contest.

Siemens Caring Hands represents a culture of giving that is cultivated by Siemens Canada. The contest empowers employees to make a difference in their communities. Employees who have demonstrated their dedication to volunteering and fundraising activities were invited to enter the contest.

Two top winners were selected to receive $10,000 donations to their charities of choice, with two runner-up winners receiving $5,000 donations to their charities. The winners of the fundraising category, Steve Maniguy of Oakville, ON, chose to support the Coast To Coast Against Cancer Foundation with Siemens’ donation. Maniguy fundraised more than $31,000 for the organization by cycling 1,384 km over eight days at two annual cycling events. His team raised more than $355,000 for the cause.

The winner of the volunteering category, Scott Narmeet of Cambridge, ON, chose to grant the donation to the Scorpions Youth Volleyball Club. Narmeet organized a developmental volleyball program for boys in Grades 7 and 8 for the club, engaging local youths to participate in sports.

The runner-up in the volunteering category, Kathe Cobb of Montreal, QC, supported the West Island Association for the Intellectually Handicapped in her hometown with Siemens’ $5,000 donation. Cobb has volunteered for many years by spending time with teens and adults supported by the association and most recently supported their annual fundraising walk.

Siemens Canada is recognizing the impact employees have made through community involvement. This year, the company donated a total of $30,000 to four Canadian non-profit organizations as recognition of the winners of an internal employee contest called Caring Hands Contest.

Siemens Caring Hands represents a culture of giving that is cultivated by Siemens Canada. The contest empowers employees to make a difference in their communities. Employees who have demonstrated their dedication to volunteering and fundraising activities were invited to enter the contest.

Two top winners were selected to receive $10,000 donations to their charities of choice, with two runner-up winners receiving $5,000 donations to their charities. The winners of the fundraising category, Steve Maniguy of Oakville, ON, chose to support the Coast To Coast Against Cancer Foundation with Siemens’ donation. Maniguy fundraised more than $31,000 for the organization by cycling 1,384 km over eight days at two annual cycling events. His team raised more than $355,000 for the cause.

The winner of the volunteering category, Scott Narmeet of Cambridge, ON, chose to grant the donation to the Scorpions Youth Volleyball Club. Narmeet organized a developmental volleyball program for boys in Grades 7 and 8 for the club, engaging local youths to participate in sports.

The runner-up in the volunteering category, Kathe Cobb of Montreal, QC, supported the West Island Association for the Intellectually Handicapped in her hometown with Siemens’ $5,000 donation. Cobb has volunteered for many years by spending time with teens and adults supported by the association and most recently supported their annual fundraising walk.

Siemens Canada is recognizing the impact employees have made through community involvement. This year, the company donated a total of $30,000 to four Canadian non-profit organizations as recognition of the winners of an internal employee contest called Caring Hands Contest.

Siemens Caring Hands represents a culture of giving that is cultivated by Siemens Canada. The contest empowers employees to make a difference in their communities. Employees who have demonstrated their dedication to volunteering and fundraising activities were invited to enter the contest.

Two top winners were selected to receive $10,000 donations to their charities of choice, with two runner-up winners receiving $5,000 donations to their charities. The winners of the fundraising category, Steve Maniguy of Oakville, ON, chose to support the Coast To Coast Against Cancer Foundation with Siemens’ donation. Maniguy fundraised more than $31,000 for the organization by cycling 1,384 km over eight days at two annual cycling events. His team raised more than $355,000 for the cause.

The winner of the volunteering category, Scott Narmeet of Cambridge, ON, chose to grant the donation to the Scorpions Youth Volleyball Club. Narmeet organized a developmental volleyball program for boys in Grades 7 and 8 for the club, engaging local youths to participate in sports.

The runner-up in the volunteering category, Kathe Cobb of Montreal, QC, supported the West Island Association for the Intellectually Handicapped in her hometown with Siemens’ $5,000 donation. Cobb has volunteered for many years by spending time with teens and adults supported by the association and most recently supported their annual fundraising walk.