Siemens Healthineers to become Healthineers

- Distinct future positioning as Healthineers
- Siemens sharpens profile as the leading industrial AI company
- Brand migration to start in 2027 with 3-year transition period

Siemens Healthineers will change its name to Healthineers. The transition to Healthineers is the next step in the company's evolution to a fully standalone leading healthcare company. For Siemens, this step further sharpens the focus on executing its strategy: scaling industrial AI by combining the real and the digital worlds.

"This is the logical next step in a journey we started years ago – and one that has proven hugely successful," said Roland Busch, President and CEO Siemens AG. "Siemens Healthineers has grown from its Siemens roots into a global leader in its own right. It is only natural that this evolution is reflected clearly in how the company presents itself to the outside world. For Siemens, this sharpens our profile as the company that scales AI in the real world. Our unique ability to combine the real and digital worlds makes this possible, accelerating profitable growth."

Bernd Montag, President and CEO Siemens Healthineers AG, said: "Siemens is where we have come from and remains an important and treasured part of our heritage. Healthineers is who we are – engineers and pioneers in healthcare. After the deconsolidation from Siemens, we will write the next chapters of our journey in the Healthineers name and will continue pioneering breakthroughs in healthcare for everyone. Everywhere. Sustainably."

Siemens has announced plans to deconsolidate Siemens Healthineers in 2027 by way of a spin-off. The spin-off will be submitted for shareholder approval of both companies at their annual shareholders' meetings in February 2027. The company
