Within the submission guidelines on CodeGuru there is a lot of information about posting as well as a Permissions paragraph. This paragraph tells you what people agreed to when they uploaded code, resources, or an article. To answer this question, submitted code has been provided with the understanding that others may use it in both, personal and corporate, applications. If you use the code, you should honor any copyright notices and other similar information that may be stated within the given code. As the fine print on nearly every site says and as it states on the general site usage notes, use of any code is at your own risk.
